I quit my job at Facebook 10 years ago. I didn't expect this.

to me

Rajshree,

Fahim here. This is a big milestone for us, so I'm going to speak from the heart.

My brother Naeem and I co-founded Educative 10 years ago this month.

We'll be celebrating all June with lots of special offers, announcements, and giveaways — more on that in a bit.

But first: some history.

Naeem and I quit our jobs at Meta and Microsoft because we thought that developer learning was broken... and we had the crazy idea that we could help fix it. This was easily the best career decision I ever made. (Pretty sure Naeem would agree ).

Based on our experience trying to keep up in a highly competitive industry, we knew that there had to be a better way for developers to learn new skills. No more books that were too theoretical and got outdated too quickly. No more alt-tabbing multiple environments and browser windows. No more tutorial hell. No more videos.

Instead, the emphasis would be hands-on, project-based learning. Build stuff, break stuff, piece it back together.

In those early days, we used to talk a lot about how you can't teach someone to swim just by watching a video. You have to jump into the water and just do it. Learning programming skills is no different.

And it turns out a few other developers agreed.

As of today, more than 2.7 million developers have used Educative to build new skills, confidently tackle interviews, and stay sharp in an industry where the only constant is change.

That's a pretty humbling figure. Every time I hear from someone learn something new or land a job they really wanted — it makes it all worth it all over again.

Thank you, sincerely, for being here and pushing us to be better every day.

So what's on tap for Educative's anniversary month?

As you can imagine, I have lots of reflections from a decade of building this platform. I'm looking forward to sharing a few highlights with you.

These will include stories about growing a startup (the highs and lows), some thoughts on how the industry has changed (in particular as it relates to the interview process at top companies, as well as AI), and predictions for where we'll be in another 10 years.

I'll also announce some exciting enhancements to the Educative platform, as we work to build the future of developer learning. It has been a journey working to deliver you a learning experience that is continually better, richer, and more personalized than before. I think you'll like what you see.

And last but not least:

To celebrate our 10-year Anniversary, we'll be offering 50% off all Educative subscriptions — for the entire month. (You can use this link to get early access).

Throughout June we'll also have plenty of extra offers, giveaways, and more, so definitely stay tuned.

Thanks for being part of this journey.

Happy learning!
